What do people love the most?

It's a good place to work, but not for everyone. In my opinion, Amazon is the best company in the world to work for in terms of career development/growth. It's also a great place for people who want to be challenged and work on a variety of projects at any given time.

What do people dislike the most?

Hard work and a long time commitment are required, but the compensation policy and transparency are really bad. Experience is heavily affected by team and managers. You can control it to some extent, but that means saying no and learning what is/is not important. Pressure to deliver and learn topics quickly. Part of evil empire that only cares about profits.
